

Mid-Centretown Community Amenities Audit

Draft: For Discussion Purposes Only

November 2010

Understanding Centretown's Need & Opportunity:

The Centretown Ward is quickly becoming one of Ottawa's most desirable destinations for downtown living. Continued demand for housing, a growth in local employment opportunities, and planned and on-going infrastructure investment in rapid transit, road improvements and bridge connections will continue to fuel changes over the coming years.

A Community Amenities Audit was undertaken to gain a greater understanding of both the existing and possible future condition of the social infrastructure serving the Centretown Ward. An important output of this work will be to identify what types of community amenities may be required to complement and facilitate the area's growth.

Goals of Audit

The overarching goal of this work was to establish a baseline of community facilities available to Centretown residents and to highlight any major gaps in provision. This community facilities audit provides:

- a listing of community facilities that serve the area
- mapping of identified facilities
- a basic assessment of how many facilities are required to meet Centretown's current and future population and how Centretown stacks up against other neighbourhoods.

Through the establishment and analysis of the existing baseline provision, identification of current amenity provision targets (where possible) and the establishment of a potential future growth scenario (based on the existing Centretown Secondary Plan projection), this study provides direction as to the future need for community facilities across the neighbourhood.

It is intended that this document be used to assist not only private sector, but also the City of Ottawa and residents' groups to better understand existing and future community needs for facilities in Centretown.

This study does not provide an evaluation of how well current facilities are used or who they are used by. The value of this piece of work is to identify baseline provision of facilities and a general assessment of how the Centretown community performs against a series of facility standards used in other communities.

Centretown's Current Community Assets

A sustainable community needs to be a complete, mixed-use district able to accommodate activity and vibrancy. It must offer residents the opportunity to interact, work, live, play, pray, shop and learn within a convenient walking or transit distance.

Community amenities are an essential component of this mix. These facilities and their related public spaces are important assets for animating the public realm, increasing access to services, improving opportunities for activity, connecting social networks, creating community destinations and contributing to a better overall quality of life for residents.

This section provides a summary of the Community Amenities present within the Centretown, including a review of:

- * Parks & Recreation Facilities
- * Indoor Recreation Amenities
- * Schools / Education Services
- * Libraries
- * Community Centres
- * Youth Centres
- * Physicians / Health Care
- * Emergency Services
- * Social Support Services
- * Childcare
- * Religious Organizations & Services

Centretown Today

Below is a summary of population and household assumptions used for this review.

	2010 Estimate (from City of Ottawa, 2010)	Future Scenario (from Secondary Plan)
Population	23,660	30,000 to 36,000
Households*	13,690	17,650 to 21,175
Geographic Area	2.1km ² / 210ha / 519 acres	2.1km ² / 210ha / 519 acres

based on current household structure of 1.7 persons per household*

Additional Study Considerations

- We would like to acknowledge the help provided by the Ottawa Neighbourhood Study team, based out of the Institute for Population Health at the University of Ottawa. They provided the foundation for much of this work.
- Like in many neighbourhoods, the community amenities present within Centretown serve a much wider catchment area and are not for exclusive use by Centretown residents. Although the presence of these facilities with the study area suggests that they are accessible to Centretown residents, without a more detailed assessment of use on facility by facility bases, we are unable to confirm that all facilities listed as part of this study are in fact used by Centretown residents.
- Religious organizations have been included for the support services many of them provide as well as the community spaces they offer, such as halls, meeting rooms, communal kitchens, etc.
- Daycares and schools are complex amenities and require detailed population projections as well as a complete understanding of existing capacity and future plans for development. Within the confines of this study, we are not able to create more detailed profiles and projections than what is presented as part of our general assumptions.

The map below shows where each of these amenity types are located across Centretown. Additional details are appended in an accompanying spreadsheet.

Centretown Tomorrow...

Centretown is growing. Using information from the current Secondary Plan for Centretown, it is estimated that the population of Centretown could increase by 50% of its 1976 level. That would equate to a population of between 30,000 and 36,000 residents. For this summary, we are using the larger estimate.

So, what does a community of 36,000 residents potentially require?

Key Messages

- * At present, as a well-established and central neighbourhood, Centretown is generally well provided for with community facilities.
- * However, like many other urban communities, there are some deficiencies, such as: community centres; meeting space for residents; local libraries; youth centres; seniors' centres; and, outdoor recreation space.
- * Facilities are generally well distributed across Centretown, with particularly strong representation in the Mid-Centretown area.
- * Although a youth centre is identified as a 'gap' in facility provision, such a centre may not be an immediate priority given the relatively small number of young people currently residing in the area (equating to only 1.8% of Centretown's current population). This number may not merit a dedicated facility. Furthermore, for seniors needs, many of the services provided by a Senior's Centre are performed by the many religious Organizations & Services dispersed across Centretown.
- * Although a local public library is identified as a 'gap' in facility provision, due to the City of Ottawa's Main Branch being located adjacent to the study area, Centretown can be considered adequately served by libraries.
- * If Centretown continues to grow, many existing community facilities will be operating at capacity and additional facilities will be required to meet demand.
- * Although currently adequately provided for, existing facilities are aging – particularly schools, community centres and indoor recreation facilities – and will require renewed investment in next 10 to 20 years.
- * The increase in demand for services can be partially addressed through an intensification of uses for existing facilities (where capacity exists). This may require an investment in facilities to allow them to deal with increased demand, longer operational hours, upgrading of facilities, etc.
- * Parks and open spaces – both active and passive – are at a premium across Centretown. Much of the existing open space provision is not formally dedicated park space, but shared recreation areas with schools or other institutional users.

- * In the absence of an opportunity to introduce a major new greenspace within the community, a review should be undertaken of existing greenspaces in Centretown to inform a strategy for their intensification and optimization of use (Dundonald, Jack Purcell, the National Museum of Nature, Minto Park and St Lukes Park, being the primary opportunities).
- * Outdoor recreation amenities are adequately provided for at the moment, although many outdoor amenities are close to threshold capacity. Additional population growth will require additional outdoor amenities or an intensification of use of existing amenities.
- * Anecdotal evidence has suggested that there is demand for additional spaces for informal recreation (such a 'pick-up' games of hockey, football and soccer). This may be a consequence of the current permitting and programming practices used by the City for organized sports that limits the use of facilities by informal groups. This may situation may potentially be improved by allowing informal groups to use non-regulation fields and facilities for informal play. This would need to be done in partnership with the School Board(s) or other institutional partners who provide recreation facilities
- * Rinks in Centretown are well used, however, anecdotal evidence suggests that the outdoor rinks could be managed more efficiently, perhaps by a community-based organization or group, to allow for an extended season with more regular cleanings. In addition to more efficient management, adding arterial ice to one outdoor rink could also allow for an intensification of its use.
- * To maximise future growth opportunities, additional provision and/or improvements of existing amenities should be considered for the following type of facilities:
 - park spaces
 - community centres
 - outdoor recreation amenities
- * Augmenting the provision of City-operated facilities, there appears to be a strong representation of informal social support services and centres providing a spectrum of activities that cater to different user groups. The majority of these are clustered in the Mid-Centretown area.
- * Additional work is required to understand future demand for all types of schools and day care facilities across Centretown. Any existing surpluses could be temporary if growth continues.
